

FAR

- Who would fare del's bear,
To groan and sweat under a weary life? Shaksp. Hamlet.
To FARE. v. n. [fapan, Saxon; varen, Dutch.]
- To go; to pass; to travel.
At last, resolving forward still to fare,
Until the blustering storm is overblown. Fairy Queen, b. i.
His spirits pure were subject to our fight,
Like to a man in flew and shape he fares. Fairfax.
So on he fares, and to the border comes
Of Eden. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. iv. l. 131.
Sadly they far'd along the sea-beat shore;
Still heav'd their hearts. Pope.
 - To be in any state good or bad.
So bids thee well to fare thy nether friend. Fairy Queen.
A stubborn heart shall fare evil at the last. Echsp. iii. 26.
Well fare the hand, which to our humble fight
Presents that beauty, which the dazzling light
Of royal splendor.
So in this throng bright Sacharissa far'd,
Oppress'd by those who strove to be her guard:
As ships, though never so obsequious, fall Foul in a tempest on their admiral. Waller.
So fares the flag among th' enraged hounds;
Repels their force, and wounds returns for wounds. Denb.
But as a barque, that in foul weather,
To's'd by two adverse winds together,
Is bruise'd and beaten to and fro;
And knows not which to turn him to;
So far'd the knight between two foes,
And knew not which of them t' oppose. Hudibras, p. i.
If you do as I do, you may fare as I fare. L'Estrange.
Thus fares the queen, and thus her fury blows
Amidst the crowd. Dryden's Æn.
English ministers never fare so well as in a time of war with a foreign power, which diverts the private feuds and animosities of the nation, and turns their efforts upon the common enemy. Addison's Freeholder, No. 49.
Some give out there is no danger at all; others are comforted that it will be a common calamity, and they shall fare no worse than their neighbours. Swift.
 - To proceed in any train of consequences good or bad.
Thus it fares when too much desire of contradiction causeth our speeches rather to pass by number than to stay for weight. Hooker, b. ii. f. 5.
So fares it when with truth falsehood contends. Milton.
 - To happen to any one well or ill. With it preceding in an imperial form.
When the hand finds itself well warmed and covered, let it refuse the trouble of feeding the mouth, or guarding the head,
'till the body be starved or killed, and then we shall see how it will fare with the hand. South's Sermons.
 - To feed; to eat; to be entertained with food.
The rich man fares sumptuously every day. Luke.
Feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly as on the trumpet's sound. Shakspere's Timon.
Men think they have fares hardly, if, in times of extemity, they have defended so low as dogs; but Galen delivereth, that, young, fat, and gelded, they were the food of many nations. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. iii. c. 25.
- FARE. n. f. [from the verb.]
- Price of passage in a vehicle by land or by water. Used only of that which is paid for the person, not the goods.
He found a ship going to Tarlish; so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it to go with them unto Tarlish. Jon.
He passage begs with unregarded pray'r,
And wants two farthings to discharge his fare. Dryd. Juv.
 - Food prepared for the table; provisions.
But come, so well refresh'd, now let us play,
As meet is, after such delicious fare. Milton's Paradise Lost.
But when the western winds with vital pow'r
Call forth the tender grass and budding flow'r,
Then, at the last, produce in open air
Both flocks, and send them to their Summer's fare. Dryden.
This is what nature's want may well suffice;
That would more is covetous, not wife:
But since among mankind so few there are,
Who will conform to philosophick fare,
This much I will indulge thee for thy ease,
And mingle something of our times to please. Dryd. Juv.
Upon his rising up he ordered the peasant to set before him whatever food he had in his house: the peasant brought out a great deal of coarse fare, of which the emperor eat very heartily. Addison's Guardian, No. 99.
- FAREWELL. adv. [This word is originally the imperative of the verb fare well, or fare you well; sis felix, abi in bonam rem; or vene sit tibi; but in time use familiarised it to an adverb, and it is used both by those who go and those who are left.]
- The parting compliment; adieu.
Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here. Shak. K. Lear.

FAR

- Farewell*, master Silence: 'I will not use many words with you; fare you well, gentlemen, both. Shaksp. Henry IV.
Whether we shall meet again, I know not,
Therefore our everlasting farewell take;
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius. Shak. Jul. Cesar.
Be not amazed, call all your senses to you; defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever. Shaksp.
An iron slumber shuts my swimming eyes;
And now farewell, invol'd in shades of night,
For ever I am ravish'd from thy sight. Dryden's Virg. Geo.
Farewell, says he; the parting sound scarce fell
From his faint lips, but she replied farewell. Dryden.
O queen, farewell! be still posselt
Of dear remembrance, blessing still and blest! Pope's Odyss.- It is sometimes used only as an expression of separation without kindness.
Farewell the year which threaten'd so
The fairest light the world can show. Waller.
Treading the path to nobler ends,
A long farewell to love I gave;
Relov'd my country and my friends
All that remain'd of me should have. Waller.

FAREWELL. n. f.
1. Leave; act of departure.
See how the morning opens her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun. Shaksp. Hen. VI.
If chance the radiant sun, with farewell sweet,
Extend his evening beam, the fields revive,
The birds their notes renew, and bleating herds Attest their joy, that hill and valley ring. Milt. Par. Lost.
As in this grove I took my last farewell,
As on this very spot of earth I fell. Dryden.
Before I take my farewell of this subject, I shall advise the author for the future to speak his meaning more plainly. Addis.- It is sometimes used as an adjective; leave-taking.
Several ingenious writers, who have taken their leave of the public in farewell papers, will not give over so, but intend to appear again; though perhaps under another form, and with a different title. Speculator, No. 445.

FARINA/CEOUS. adj. [from farina, Latin.] Mealy; tasting like meal or flower of corn.
The properest food of the vegetable kingdom for mankind, is taken from the farinaceous or mealy seeds of some culmi-ferous plants; as oats, barley, wheat, rice, rye, maize, panick, and millet. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

FARM. n. f. [ferre, French; pepm, provision, Saxon.]

 - Ground let to a tenant; ground cultivated by another man upon condition of paying part of the profit to the owner or landlord.

FA'RMER. n. f. [fermier, French; or from farm.]
 - One who cultivates hired ground.
Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar, and the creature run from the cur: there thou might'st behold the great image of authority; a dog's obey'd in office. Shaksp.
 - One who cultivates ground, whether his own or another's.
Nothing is of greater prejudice to the farmer than the stocking of his land with cattle that are larger than it will bear.
Motimer's Husbandry.

FA'RMOST. n. f. [superlative of far.] Most distant; remote.
A spacious cave, within its farmost part,
Was hew'd and fashion'd by laborious art,
Through the hill's hollow sides. Dryden's Æn. b. vi.

FA'RNESS. n. f. [from far.] Distance; remoteness.
Their nearness on all quarters to the enemy, and their far-ness from timely succour by their friends, have forced the commanders to call forth the uttermost number of able hands to fight. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

FARRA'GINOUS. adj. [from farrago, Latin.] Formed of different materials.
Being a confusion of knaves and fools, and a farrag-inous concurrence of all conditions, tempers, sexes and ages, it is but natural if their determinations be monstrous, and many ways inconsistent with truth. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

FARRAGO. n. f. [Latin.] A mass formed confusedly of several ingredients; a medley.

FARRIER.

FAR

- FA'RRIER. n. f. [ferrier, French; ferrarius, Latin.]

Are for to be made of. Tuff. Eub.
The swine, although multiparous, yet being bisulcous, and only cloven-hoofed, is farrrow'd with open eyes, as other bi-sulcous animals. Brown.

Ev'n her, who did her numerous offspring boast,
As fair and fruitful as the fow that carry'd
The thirty pigs, at one large litter farrrow'd. Dryd. Juv.

FART. n. f. [pate, Saxon.] Wind from behind.
Love is the fart
Of every heart;
It pains a man when 'tis kept close;
And others doth offend when 'tis let loose. Suckling.

To FART. v. a. [from the noun.] To break wind behind.
As when we a gun discharge,
Although the bore be not so large,
Before the flame from muzzle bursts,
Just at the breech it flashes first;
So from my lord his passion broke,
He farted first, and then he spoke. Swift.

FA'RTHUR. adv. [This word is now generally considered as the comparative degree of far; but by no analoger can far make farther or farthest: it is therefore probable, that the ancient orthography was nearer the true, and that we ought to write farther and farthest, from farth, farther, farthest, ponder, pynder, Saxon; the o and u, by resemblance of sound, being first confounded in speech, and afterwards in books.]
At a greater distance; to a greater distance; more remotely; beyond; moreover.

To make a perfect judgment of good pictures, when compared with one another, besides rules, there is farther required a long conversation with the best pieces. Dryden's Duffresny.
They contented themselves with the opinions, fashions and things of their country, without looking any farther. Lake.

FA'RTHUR. adj. [supposed from far, more, probably from farth.]

 - More remote.
Let me add a farther truth, that without those ties of gratitude, I have a most particular inclination to honour you.
Dryden's Juv. Dedication.
 - Longer; tending to greater distance.
Before our farther way the fates allow,
Here must we fix on high the golden bough. Dryden's Æn.

FA'RTHURANCE. n. f. [more properly farthurance, from farther.] Encouragement; promotion.
That was the foundation of the learning I have, and of all the farthurance that I have obtained. Albham's Schoolmaster.

FARTHERMORE. adv. [more properly furthermore.] Besides;
over and above; likewise.
Farthermore the leaves, body and boughs of this tree, by so much exceed all other plants, as the greatest men of power and worldly ability surpass the meanest. Raleigh's History.

To FARTHER. v. a. [more proper To farther.] To promote;
to facilitate; to advance.
If he had farthered or hindered the taking of the town,
Dryden's Dedication to the Æn.

FA'RTHET. adv. [more properly farthest. See FARTHER.]

 - At the greatest distance.
 - To the greatest distance.

FA'RTHET. adj. Most distant; remotest.
Yet it must be withal considered, that the greatest part of the world are they which be farthest from perfection. Hooker.

FA'RTHING. n. f. [peondling, Saxon, from peope, four, that is, the fourth part of a penny.]

 - The fourth of a penny; the smallest English coin.
A farthing is the least denomination or fraction of money used in England. Cocker's Arithmetick.
Ere all those things we toil so hard in,
Would not avail one single farthing. Prior.
 - Copper money.
The parish find, 'tis true; but our church-wardens Feed on the silver, and give us the farthings. Gay.
You are not obliged to take money not of gold or silver;
not the halpence of farthings of England. Swift.
 - It is used sometimes in a sense hyperbolical: as, it is not worth a farthing; or proverbial.

FAS

- His son builds on, and never is content,
'Till the last farthing is in structure spent. Dryden's Juv.
- FA'RTHINGALE. n. f. [This word has much exercised the etymology of Stinner, who at last seems to determine that it is derived from veru garde: if he had considered what veru signifies in Dutch, he might have found out the true sense.] A hoop, circles of whalebone used to spread the petticoat to a wide circumference.
With filken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and things. Shaksp.
Tell me,
What compass will you wear your farthingale? Shaksp.
Arthur wore in hall
Round table, like a farthingale. Hudibras, p. i. cont. 1.
Some will have it that it portends the downfall of the French king; and observe, that the farthingale appeared in England a little before the ruin of the Spanish monarchy. Addison.
She seems a medley of all ages,
With a huge farthingale to swell her rustian stuff;
A new comode, a topknot, and a ruff. Swift.
- FA'RTHINGSWORTH. n. f. [farthing and worth.] As much as is sold for a farthing.
They are thy customers; I hardly ever sell them a farthings-worth of any thing. Arbuthnot's History of John Bull.
- FASCES. n. f. [Latin.] Rods antiently carried before the consuls as a mark of their authority.
The duke beheld, like Scipio, with disdain,
That Carthage, which he ruin'd, rise once more;
And shook aloft the fascies of the main,
To fright those slaves with what they felt before. Dryden.
- FASCI/A. n. f. [Latin.] A fillet; a bandage.
FASCIATED. adj. [from fascia.] Bound with fillets; tied with a bandage. DiD.
- FASCIATION. n. f. [from fascia.] Bandage; the act or manner of binding diseased parts.
Three especial sorts of fasciation, or rowling, have the worthies of our profession commended to posterity. Wifeman.
- To FASCINATE. v. a. [fascino, Latin.] To bewitch; to enchant; to influence in some wicked and secret manner.
There be none of the affections which have been noted to fascinate or bewitch, but love and envy. Eaton's Essay 9.
Such a fascinating sin this is, as allows men no liberty of consideration. Decay of Piety.
- FASCINATION. n. f. [from fascinate.] The power or act of bewitching; enchantment; unseen inexplicable influence.
He had such a crafty and bewitching fascination, both to move pity and to induce belief, as was like a kind of fascination and enchantment to those that saw him or heard him. Bacon.
The Turks hang old rags, or such like ugly things, upon their fairest horses, and other goodly creatures, to secure them against fascination. Waller.
- There is a certain bewitchery or fascination in words, which makes them operate with a force beyond what we can naturally give an account of. South's Sermons.
- FASCI/NE. n. f. [French.] A faggot. Military cant.
The black prince passed many a river without the help of pontoons, and filled a ditch with faggots as successfully as the generals of our times do with fascines. Addison's Spectator.
- FASCI/NOUS. adj. [fascinum, Latin.] Caused or acting by witchcraft, or enchantment.
I shall not discuss the possibility of fascinous diseases, farther than refer to experiment. Harvey on Consumptions.
- FA'SHION. n. f. [fapon, French; facies, Latin.]
- Form; make; state of any thing with regard to its outward appearance.
They pretend themselves grieved at our solemnities in erecting churches, at their form and fashion, at the stateliness of them and costliness, and at the opinion which we have of them.
Hooker, b. v. f. 17.
The fashion of his countenance was altered. Luke ix. 29.
Stand these poor people's friend,
—I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man: Shaksp. Henry VIII.
 - The make or cut of cloaths.
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,
And entertain a score or two of taylor's,
To study fashions to adorn my body. Shaksp. Richard III.
You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments. Shaksp. King Lear.
 - Manner; sort; way.
For that I love your daughter
In such a righteous fashion as I do,
Perforce against all checks, rebukes, and manners,
I must advance. Shakspere's Merry Wives of Windsor.
Pluck Casca by the sleeve,
And he will, after his four fashion, tell you What hath proceeded. Shakspere's Julius Cesar.
The commissioners either pulled down or defaced all images in churches; and that in such unseasonable and unseasoned fashion, as if it had been done in hostility against them. Hayw.
 - Custom operating upon dress, or any domestick ornaments.
Here's
